Total of 33 Saved From the Valencia---Latest Account of the Awful Disaster.

Seattle, Jan. 25 .- Singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," men, women and children shivered and clung together on the hurricane deck of the Valencia when the Queen hove in sight. Then, thinking that they were to be rescued, they jumped on a life raft and with two oars put out for the Queen. The men on the leter did not see them, and went away. They battled with the waves until finally picked up by the Topeka, wires the Times correspondent on the Topeka. The telegram was filed this morning at Neah bay. The women on the ill-fated vessel took off their underskirts and, saturating them with kerosene, burned them as signals to attract passing vessels, but all in vain. When the Topeka rescued the survivors on the raft they were hauled aboard half lifeless and hurried to the dining saloon. There Dr. Whiting, aided by every available man on the steamer, stripped their bodies, rubbed them with whisky and restored them to consciousness.

steamer Valencia now lies submerged and unsafe. and broken but a portion of a mast stands above water, and the fleet of steamers and tugs have today been volunteered to make the attempt, and turning their attention to patrolling made a daring effort. They were unwith survivors, though the chances are ing succor to those who were washed ashore, others scouring the rugged rocks of the shore line seeking for any survivors that may have reached shore and be lying foodless and helpless, and others are engaged in the melancholy duty of recovering bodies.

Thirty-Six Survivors.

Of the total company of 154, but 33 have been definitely accounted for, and three men believed to be other survivors were seen on shore, from the whaling vessel Orion, near the San Francisco, Jan. 25.—Captain Wallace, superintendent in this city of the Pacific Coast Steamship company, received a dispatch this afternoon from James E. Pharo, the comwhaling vessel Orion, near the noon from James E. Pharo, the com-wreck, huddling about a fire. Six survivors have been taken on the Salvor, the City of Topeka to the rescue of most of them so badly cut up and the Valencia's survivors, reporting the bruised, without boots and so overcontrolless walk, are still camped at Darling

Scant Hope Remains.

Scant hope is entertained by those on board the patrolling steamers that any others will be recovered, for the doctors on rescuing tugs say the limit of human endurance will have been passed before this time. The fleet of find shelter steamers engaged in patrolling were seen this morning in the vicinity of Darling river. The steamer Salvor, which left Bamfield Creek this morning after sending part of her crew over land trails to seek survivors, and the whaling steamer Orion (a vessel wreck, being equipped with a harpoon gun), the steamer Queen, which reaching shore stopped at the scene en route to San Francisco, the tug Lorne, sent from Victoria last night with a party of blue packets and a life boat on board, were all there, and, as far as could be learned from correspondents at various points, none had succeeded in finding other survivors.

Tried to Reach Castaways.

The steamer Salvor made an effort to get one of the boats through the surf near Darling Creek, this morning, to landing supplies for the men at Darling telegraph hut, but the surf ran too high, though, and it seemed impossible to get a boat through it. The beat was forced to return. The Salvor soon afterwards located two men and a boy. At 10:40 a. m. a fire, evidently built as a signal, was seen on the beach between Beegardess Point and Klanewaw, where the wreck lies. After transferring the survivors taken from Bamfield to the steamer City of Topeka, the Salvor went to notify the tug Lorne of the finding of the party on shore and asked if the British bluejackets on board the Lorne with a life- Captain O. Plan for Permanent Organization Submitted and Well Received---Final Action Taken Today.

With great enthusiasm on the part of delegates representing thirteen states and one province of British Columbia, the initial plans were laid yesterday for the formation of a "See America First league." The conference of the delegates will be completed today, and when it is over it is hoped and believed that a permanent organization will be perfected which will redound to the lasting good of the western half of the North American continent, and which will be influential in diverting travel of eastern tourists from the old world to the western share of the western homisphore. from the old world to the western shore of the western hemisphere. The conference held two sessions yesterday, both of them in the armory of the Utah National guard. George E. Chamberlain, governor of Oregon. presided over the morning meeting, and in the afternoon Fisher Harris of Salt Lake City was made permanent chairman.

A plan of organization and publicity, agreed upon by the representatives of divers western commercial bodies who assembled in advance of the conference, was submitted yesterday afternoon and referred to a special committee. It will be reported back this morning, and the discussion of it will occupy most of the day. It is an enthusiastic body of patriotic western American citizens which has invaded Salt Lake to attend the conference. Harmony prevailed throughout the two meetings, and, to all appearances, will be the rule today. The actuating sentiment of every delegate seems to be that the conference should unite on a plan satisfactory to every interest represented, and then to go home and work to carry out that plan.

The most important work will come today, when the plan of action will be reported back. Tonight there will be a big banquet at the Commercial club to close the proceedings. Former Governor Heber M. Wells of Utah will officiate as toastmaster, and speeches will be made by men from the various states who have journeyed here to lend their counsel to the move-

Powers, who learned earlier in the morning in reading The Herald that he was to represent Mayor Ezra Thompson and welcome the visitors on behalf of Salt Lake City.

Previous to the assembling in the armory a large majority of the visitors assembled in the Commercial club. There were many pleasant little reunions. There was hustling on the part of Fisher Harris, the other members of the power of the important interests of the people who elected them, into the care of others, and have journeyed to this care of others, and have jo
